Hi. My name is Oisín and shortly, I will be performing the poem "I'd Never be a Nazi" by Lucas Jones. The main theme of the poem is radicalisation. It's written from the perspective of a man who has been radicalised. He claims he would never be a Nazi. However, over the course of the poem, we see more similarities between him and Nazis. He is not necessarily a bad person, but has become hateful. Lucas Jones wrote this poem looking at the world we live where people exposed to dangerous ideology through new technologies.

I chose this poem because it is important to be aware of how people fall to hatred and anger. It tells us that people who do bad things often believe they are doing them for a just cause. Stories like this happen all over the world and it's our responsibility to understand not just what happens, but the people it happens to. Thank you.
