Section B – The Plantation. Answer all questions.

30
30

Read this account of the plantation of Co. Leitrim and answer the questions which follow. The account was written in 1683, sixty years after the plantation began.

The chief town is Jamestown, a well-walled town standing on the river Shannon. The town consists of about 60 families but most of them live outside the walls. There is a good weekly market, four fairs every year and a company of foot soldiers as garrison.

It is very well planted with Protestant inhabitants. The natives or Irish inhabitants are civil, hospitable and intelligent. The Irish women are handsome, and both sexes speak reasonably proper English.

This county has very good pasture, and is far more proper for feeding and rearing cattle than for grain. In it are vast woods, full of large and excellent timber. There are many herds of red deer. The wolves, which were very numerous are now very few. There are several eyries of eagles. Lough Melvin is well stored with salmon.

- (a) In what decade did the plantation of Leitrim begin? Tick (✓) one of the following:

1600s ☐

1620s ☒

1640s ☐

- (b) Name three features of a plantation town that were evident in Jamestown.

1.	Walled town
2.	Protestant inhabitants
3.	British style farming The people speak English

- (c) Do you think the person who wrote this account was from an Irish background or an English background? Give reasons for your answer based on the document.

I think the person who wrote this account was from an English background because they described the town in a positive light and didn't talk about the erasure of Irish culture and language that would have been caused by that plantation.

- (d) Did the writer believe that the plantation of Leitrim was successful or unsuccessful? Give reasons for your answer based on the document.

3 ✓ The writer believed the plantation of Leitrim was successful because he says there are many Protestant families, that they've controlled the wildlife and that the Irish women speak English.

Name a plantation you studied as part of your Junior Cycle history course.

(e) ✓ Ulster plantation

- (f) Who ordered this plantation to take place?

2 ✓ King James I

- (H) What changes occurred in Ireland as a result of the plantation which you studied? [3 changes]

5 x 3 ✓ 15 / 5 There was a loss of Irish culture and language because in the plantation they were banned. This led to some native Irish people not knowing their own language. There was the introduction of British culture and languages also their religion, Protestantism, all of which were pushed in the plantation. A new farming method, crop farming, came too, and it worked very well.

Section C – Revolutions (American or French) Answer all questions.

that's annoying
I didn't see that 30

- (a) Name a revolution you have studied from Europe or the wider world which took place before the twentieth century. What were conditions in the country like before the revolution began? [3 conditions]

Revolution: ~~1492 Rebellion~~ American Revolution

Conditions:

~~The people were divided into three groups. The Protestant Ascendancy, the dissenters and the Catholics. The Protestant Ascendancy was a wealthy land-owning class that made up the majority of the membership of the majority of the population. They controlled parliament but wanted more power. The dissenters were Presbyterians who disagreed with the Protestant Ascendancy and had less rights than them.~~

The Americans were controlled by the British who had gone to war with France. As a result of that war, many British troops were stationed in America. The Americans 9 didn't like this because they were being forced to provide for the soldiers through taxes.

There were also acts that made Americans only be able to sell to the British at low prices, which hurt their businesses. They didn't have any say in parliament either, which made them very angry.

(b)

Explain how these conditions led to the revolution.

When the British passed the Stamp Act, people protested in Boston, but they were shot, causing the Boston Massacre. More Americans began to train for war and stockpile weapons, until General Gage came in and attacked, starting the war.

(c)

Write an outline of the main events that happened during this revolution. [Refer to 3]

After the first shots at Lexington, the Second Continental Congress passed the Declaration of Independence, officially starting the war. One of the first big battles was Bunker Hill. The Americans were weak and disorganised and they lost to the well-trained British army. They spent a harsh winter in Valley Forge, and even though it was hard, it strengthened them. They emerged a real army under George Washington. In the battle at Saratoga, the strengthened Americans and the newly arrived French help defeated the British. The Treaty of Paris was signed, officially giving the 13 colonies their independence. George Washington became their first president.

Section D – Irish Revolution - Answer all questions.

The following sources relate to the United Irishmen who rebelled against English rule in Ireland in 1798. Examine the sources and answer the questions which follow.

Source 1: United Irishmen upon Duty by James Gillray, 12 June 1798.

Source 2: extract from the diary of Elizabeth Richards, Co. Wexford, 30 May 1798.

In the morning a man rode into the courtyard with a drawn sword in his hand. He demanded that food should be sent to the rebel camp.

'We are starving, Ma'am', said he to Mrs. Hatton. 'Send us provisions or --' he struck his sword with violence on the top of a pump.

'The government may confiscate [take] my property for helping rebels,' said Mrs. Hatton. 'If you do not comply you shall be murdered,' was the reply.

An old man was sent to the rebel camp with a cart loaded with bacon, potatoes, etc., for which Mrs. Hatton received thanks from the rebel chiefs.

- a) According to the artist in Source 1, what is happening in Ireland? Support your points with evidence from the drawing.

Protestants

According to source 1, the rebels are stealing food from the poor ~~British~~ and burning their houses. We see the rebels with wheelbarrows and food thrown over their shoulders, walking away from an innocent group of Protestants while fire blazes in the background. The rebels also seem to be pushing the Protestants back into the burning building.

- b) Is Source 2 a primary source or a secondary source? Give a reason for your answer.

Primary or secondary:

Primary

Reason:

The person who wrote it was there when it happened and wrote the entry soon after.

- c) In Source 2, do you think Elizabeth Richards is positive, negative or neutral in her account of the rebels? Give a reason for your answer based on evidence from Source 2.

Positive, negative or neutral:

~~Neutral~~

Reason:

Even though the rebels threaten to kill her, she includes the fact that they are starving and that they thanked her for her contribution.

[Refer to 3]

Write an account of the causes and/or consequences of the Irish Revolution

The 1798 rebellion was caused by the ~~(people living in)~~ separation between people. The Protestant Ascendancy owned most of the land even though they made up a ~~majority~~ minority of the population. They controlled the parliament but wanted more power. The Presbyterians (known as dissenters) made up a minority of the population specifically in the area around Belfast. They had ~~few rights~~ and wanted to be able to vote and sit in parliament. The Catholics made up a majority of the population but owned nearly no land. They were very badly treated by the Penal laws which made it impossible for them to be in positions of power, like parliament or land ownership. They wanted rights and freedoms. By the end of the rebellion, Catholics had more freedoms, but sectarianism had ~~grown because~~ of actions committed during the rebellion.
